

A CREATION STORY

The Big Bang

In the beginning, long, long ago, before Time and Place, there was a great nothingness. And in this nothingness there was a Great Being whose name was HU. HU, Hu, Hu.

And this Great Being had a mind, a great intelligence of vast inner vision and infinite conception. And it had a sound like SSSSH, SSSSH, SSSSH. You can hear it inside your own head. Listen...SSSSH. In this Great Being there was no dark or light, no above or below, no here or there, no now and then, no in or out - only the sound of SSSSH.

Then one moment, like any other moment since there was no Time, a thought crossed this Great Being's mind. We may never know what this thought was...a longing, a bliss, a memory, or a dream. But we do know that it was the first thought the Great Being had ever had.

And it was so big and so new and so significant that, in that great vacuum of the Great Being's mind, the energy of this thought caused quite a stir. Such a stir that a giant explosion occurred!!!

Everything began to expand. Particles began moving faster and faster, creating Time as they went. And these particles began moving out wider and wider, creating the directions as they flew. Thus Time and Space came into being. Everything went faster and faster and wider and wider until they created the heavens and the earth, the sun and the moon, the planets and the stars, the galaxies and the very universe itself.

And even today you can hear the sound of the Great Being's mind inside your head. Listen...SSSSH. Imagine what might happen if that thought ever crossed your mind? What might it set in motion?

Yesterday, I sought out the Cosmic Background Radiation. I looked high and low, in and out, here and there, up and down, and found it not. I prayed to it, I begged of it, I journeyed for it, but perceived it not.

And then, underneath it all, barely perceptible, unrecognizable, unspoken, disembodied, came a voice that whispered in a drone that I could hardly hear:

I have always been here and always will be. And my name is Hu.
